

Academic Interview Questions and Tips

Initial-round academic job market interviews—usually conducted by phone, over Skype, or at professional conferences—can be stressful and intellectually demanding. To know some of the most common questions and rehearse (without memorizing!) possible answers can help a great deal. Remember that oral communications appointments are available at grad.uchicago.edu.

QUESTIONS:

Humanities and Social Sciences

- Why do you want to teach at this institution?
- Please describe your current academic work and its contribution to the field.
- How would you organize an introductory survey course in your area of expertise?
- Please describe what you think will be the most important developments in your field in the next decade.
- Tell me about the most difficult class you've ever taught.
- What textbook would you use to teach an introductory class in your field?
- How would you approach the challenge of teaching our students when you've only taught UChicago students?
- Describe a situation in your program or in one of the classes you taught where there was a conflict and how you helped resolve it.
- What questions do you have for us?

Physical and Biological Sciences

- Why do you want to work in this lab as a postdoc and what expertise would you bring to it?
- Please describe your current academic work and its contribution to the field.
- What kinds of roles have you played in labs already and what additional roles are you prepared to play as a postdoc/professor?
- Please describe what you think will be the most important developments in your field in the next decade.
- What textbook would you use to teach an introductory class in your field?

ASKING GOOD QUESTIONS

Ask questions that demonstrate that you have done your homework; that you are excited to contribute to the department; and that reveal something about you.

Avoid yes or no questions! Begin questions with "I'm interested in hearing more about [x]" or "I saw on the website that you are opening a center in [y] and would love to know if there are plans to develop programming there."

Show that you are informed, interested, and enthusiastic to contribute.

IMPORTANT:

- Marital Status, Number of Children, Citizenship, Religious Beliefs, Sexual Orientation, Gender, or Disabilities: hiring committees are not permitted to ask questions about these areas.
- These questions might come up in informal contexts that feel off-the-record: though you may be at a departmental cocktail party or gathering, it's still not permitted for interviewers to ask these questions.
- Have responses ready.

Strong Interview Answers:

- Brevity—two sentences instead of three
- Articulating broad stakes of the question
- Addressing opposing views
- Positive accounts of your department/experience

Indicators of confidence:

- Rephrasing a question to clarify/shift focus
- Tying answers to previous questions
- Taking a moment to think about an answer

Rhetorical Strategies:

Acknowledge, Adjust, Pivot:

- “I thought exactly the same thing at first, but I think that the real concern is [x].”

Admit a Hard Question:

- “That’s a really interesting thought. Do you mind if I take a second to think about it?”
- “That’s a tough question to unpack. What do you think would be the first step?”

Provide Background for Answers:

- “I’ve spent some very productive time on committees in my department and I’ve enjoyed the experience. Can you say more about opportunities to do department service at University X?”

In the Week(s) Before:

How to Prep:

- Do research. Understand as much as you can about the institution and its context.
- Record your answers (audio only and then on video). Watch and listen with a friend or trusted colleague.
- Practice with partners outside your discipline. Have them ask you tough questions about why your research matters.
- Develop strong questions. What are you actually interested in knowing about the institution? Design questions that say something unique about you.

Try Out Answers to Questions About:

- Your research: its value in the discipline and its trajectory.
- Your courses: What kind of teacher are you and how do you think about teaching? How will you prepare to teach students at particular institutions?
- Your next project: Where is your research heading and how will you advance the goals of the institution to which you are applying?
- Mentoring: How do you support students outside the classroom?
- Tricky questions: there are things that hiring committees shouldn’t be asking about (see reverse), but it’s important to prepare answers just in case.
