Summary

About

I teach, empower, and guide others as they navigate their unique career paths.

My passion is to serve as a resource and advocate for graduate students and postdocs, particularly through tailored career and professional development endeavors. My experience as a Ph.D. scientist allows me to directly relate to and assist junior scientists as they progress in their careers. My areas of expertise include: career advising, higher education administration, direct training programs, social media optimization, data management from large- and small-scale surveys, event coordination, reaccreditation, and cultivating relationships both internal and external to an institute. Additionally, I am highly invested in the support of women in science, and postdoctoral issues.

I facilitate and manage workshops and events on subjects such as: networking skills, successful career planning, effective scientific communications (via posters, presentations, etc.), interviewing skills, academic job searches, and social media utilization. I excel at event planning and coordination, greatly enjoy working strategically with multiple networks within an institute, and am highly efficient at managing various long-term projects as well as day-to-day educational programming.

Accomplishments Summary

“I’m a computational scientist and physicist with key talents in science journalism, manuscript writing, and grant preparation. I excel at meeting tight deadlines, both independently and as an adaptable team member, and can manage, evaluate, and communicate data to a wide variety of stakeholders.

During my graduate and postdoc studies, I’ve taken on various leadership roles, including mentoring three undergraduate interns, coordinating institute-wide research events for hundreds of people, and leading two journal clubs.”

(Modified) <https://www.themuse.com/advice/5-templates-thatll-make-writing-the-perfect-linkedin-summary-a-breeze>

Mission-Based Summary

“My goal is to identify effective and impactful solutions to social issues surrounding poverty and at risk youth. Currently, I am a graduate student in social service at The University of Chicago, focusing on improving underrepresented youth’s mental health.

I also serve as an organizer at the Southwest Organizing Project (SWOP), a non-profit organization based in Chicago. I interact with advocacy groups, public and private schools, and religious institutions. Together, we build innovative and inspiring programming to assist at risk youth in improving their life and neighborhoods.”

Short and Sweet Summary

“With over six years of experience within the field of data science, I am driven to solve large-scale public health problems. I am currently working to understand relationships in health and disease at hospitals that mainly serve low income communities in the greater Midwest. As I finish my graduate work at the University of Chicago’s Bioinformatics program, I look forward to bringing my skills and experience to new opportunities.

Competencies: statistics, machine learning, cloud computing, C, C++, Python/Java/R, data visualization and communication.”

Request an Introduction

- Make sure you know the common connection well enough to ask for a favor!
- Tell them why you want to meet the other person
- Be understanding if they decline the request
- Determine the best channel for outreach (it may not always be LinkedIn):

Dear Sarah,

How have you been? I hope things are going as well as possible these days.

I'm writing because I noticed on LinkedIn that you are connected with someone named Ray Smith. I'm interested in speaking with him because I'm considering a career shift into the consulting industry. Would you by any chance feel comfortable introducing us by email? If not, I totally understand but figured I would ask just in case. Thanks so much for considering it!

Sincerely,

Briana

Offer to Make a Connection

Hello Trinity,

I recently saw your posting on the Chicago Data Science LinkedIn group seeking input on a new approach for investigating computer-mediated alternative realities. A former colleague of mine, Thomas Anderson, is an expert in this area and recently published a paper, “Down the rabbit hole” in Science 6 months ago: [link]. If you think his input would be helpful, I’m happy to make an introduction.

Best,
Morpheus

New Connections: Do's & Don'ts

DO:

- Send brief message, 1 paragraph max
- Express interest in their personal career path
- Ask for 30 min of their time
- Prioritize in-person meetings when possible
- Follow up in 1 wk. if no reply

DO NOT:

- Write an essay
- Seem desperate
- Attach resume
- Ask questions by email/inmail that negate the necessity to meet
- Send two messages in <1 week
- Ask for a job

Cultivate Existing Connections

Imagine you left UChicago today.

Who are the 10 people you'd email to solicit advice?

Contact them now, when you don't need anything.

Hoffman & Cassnocha, start-up of you

Workshop outline

Optimize your LinkedIn profile

Build & maintain relationships

- ▶ Leverage your LinkedIn network & job search

For the Job Search

- Maintain the connections
 - Keep them updated about your progress
 - Share interesting articles, papers, events
 - Congratulate them – awards, papers, grants, promotions, new jobs, etc.
 - Continue to ask serious and real questions about their job, company, career track

For the Job Search

- Once you're ready to apply to positions:
 - Asks:
 - If they can take a look at your resume
 - If they'd be comfortable passing your resume along
 - If they have any details about the position or team that the position is a part of
 - If they are directly involved in hiring: send them your application materials when you apply online in an email
